A MESSAGE FROM THE SIT-IN AT STANFORD

The students and faculty now sitting in at Stanford's Applied Electronics Laboratory are demanding that research in chemical and biological warfare, electronic counter-measures and other forms of counter-insurgency, and classified research be discontinued.

The Stanford Board of Trustees control the direction of the research done at Stanford. They also control the direction of production in many of the industries in the Industrial Park. Right now, much of that research and production is in destructive military areas.

We have joined together to challenge this destructive, military trend in the University, and we hope that those of you who also oppose this trend will talk with us about it. We appreciate any support you can give us.
