

Bruce Franklin is being fired, not because of illegal acts, but because the political views he states are, as Professors Brown and Kennedy say in the Board decision, "uncomfortably heterodox" — that is, they frighten many people connected with Stanford University. Firing Franklin is an act of political repression which threatens all of us who think that the freedom to make even the most "uncomfortably heterodox" statements must be protected so long as those statements do not constitute illegal acts. Bruce Franklin wants to contest his firing in the courts, and that contest will really be on behalf of our civil liberties as well as his own. Costs will be at least $25,000.
